

Allyson LaCour Biography

Born in Daytona Beach but raised on stages across Florida, Allyson LaCour has spent most of her life singing stories. From the age of four years old, singing 80s and 90s hits in the backseat, she knew music was her future. Allyson's father used to pull her up on stage with him at open mic nights, cultivating her love for music and community.

Soon, people began asking her to perform. From Colbie Calait to Sugarland to John Mayer, Allyson found strength in singing songs with a story. It wasn't long until she began writing songs herself—to tell her own story. What started as a fun way to bond with her father, turned into a natural instinct to express her feelings. Music empowered her.

As a singer-songwriter, she blurs the lines between folk, country and pop music. Her diverse musical interests converge into a smooth, genre-bending sound that attracts the hearts and minds of anyone with a story to tell. She has had the opportunity to perform in various singing competitions, including Central Florida Idol, the Colgate Country Showdown, The Voice, and American Idol.

Allyson is releasing her debut EP, Living Fearlessly, under the Hands in Motion music label directed by GRAMMY® award winning and Latin GRAMMY® award nominated pianist and producer, Lannie Battistini. Her new music is a reflection of her journey through life's hills and valleys, along with the bravery to embrace and tell her own story. With her signature country twang, she sings about a love lost in "Chardonnay, I Love You's," while crooning her one true love in the deeply soulful "You and Me." Her songs pull listeners in but her stories make them stay.

Allyson currently resides in Riverview, FL, with her husband and beautiful baby boy. In this next chapter of her life, she aims to be fearless in achieving her dreams in the hope of inspiring others to do the same.

By sharing her story with the world, she invites us to live fearlessly.
